I am the son of a black man from Kenya and a white woman from Kansas. I was raised with the help of a white grandfather who survived the Depression to serve in Patton’s Army during World War II and a white grandmother who worked on a bomber assembly line at Fort Leavenworth while he was overseas.

I’ve gone to some of the best schools in America and lived in one of the world’s poorest nations. I am married to a black American who carries within her the blood of slaves and slave-owners — an __16__ we pass on to our two precious daughters. I have brothers, sisters, nieces, nephews, uncles and cousins, of every race and every hue, scattered across three continents, and __17__ I live. I will never forget that in no other country on Earth is my story even incredible. It’s a story that hasn’t made me the most conventional candidate. But it is a story that has seared into my genetic makeup the idea that this nation is more than the sum of its parts — that out of many, we are truly one. Throughout the first year of this campaign, against all predictions to the contrary, we saw how hungry the American people were for this message of unity.

__18__ the temptation to view my candidacy through a purely racial lens, we have commanding victories in states with some of the whitest populations in the country. In South Carolina, __19__ the Confederate Flag still flies, we built a powerful coalition of African-Americans and white Americans.

三、段落閱讀（第31-40題）

說明：下列三篇短文段落共有10個問題，閱讀後請依文意與題意選出最恰當的選項，並將代號標示在答案卡上。

I had a great feeling of relief when I began to understand that a youngster needs more than what is taught in school subjects. I know mathematics well, and I teach it well. I used to think that was all I needed to do. Now I teach children, not math. I accept the fact that I can only succeed partially with some of them. When I don’t have to know all the answers, I seem to have more answers than when I tried to be the expert. The youngster who really made me understand this was Eddie. I asked him one day why he thought he was doing so much better than last year. He gave meaning to my whole new orientation. “It’s because I like myself now when I’m with you,” he said.

31. What is the main idea of this passage?
   (A) A teacher needs to be an expert in subject matters to teach students well.
   (B) A teacher will have more answers if he/she tries not to be an expert.
   (C) A teacher is merely obligated to succeed in teaching school subjects.
   (D) A teacher should teach to improve students’ self-images.

32. The main idea of this passage is supported by ____________.
   (A) the teacher’s feeling of relief
   (B) the teacher’s reluctance of being an expert
   (C) the teacher’s positive influence on Eddie’s higher self-esteem
   (D) the teacher’s sense of pride in Eddie’s better math performance
Industrialization promoted urbanization, and urbanization eventually gave birth to suburbanization. This trend, which was repeated across America, nurtured the development of the American car culture, the building of a national highway system, and a mushrooming of suburbs around American cities, which rewove the fabric of American life. Many other developed and developing countries followed the American model, with all its upsides and downsides that run in, out, and around not only America’s major cities, but China’s, India’s, and South America’s as well. And as these urban areas attract more people, the sprawl extends in every direction. High density of urban population thus raises a red flag.

33. Which of the following can be inferred from this passage?
   (A) Many urban areas are overpopulated, which may eventually bring some impact on the people and the environment.
   (B) The sprawl of suburban areas could potentially jeopardize urban development.
   (C) American automobile industry widens the already yawning gap between the cities and the rural areas.
   (D) Big cities in China, India and South America forge an alliance with American cities, which could reshape the metropolitan identity.

34. The metaphorical meaning of the word “mushrooming” is _______________.
   (A) head-on clash  (B) accelerating growth
   (C) impending storm  (D) catastrophic fall

Intelligence and ability may play a role in influencing individual performance. However, quite a few studies show that opportunity and situational factors have far more to do with achievement. Many of the differences in academic or occupational achievement observed among adolescents are due not to disparities in adolescents’ hereditary qualities, including intelligence, abilities and personal temperament, but to those in the environments in which these characteristics are expressed.

35. Which of the following is the most appropriate title for this passage?
   (A) Intelligent Quotient: An Indicator to Future Success
   (B) Nature or Nurture: Environments Matter More
   (C) Building Adolescents’ Achievement: A Personality Factor
   (D) Occupational Success: On Account of Academic Achievement

36. What view of the author’s can be predicted from this passage?
   (A) Adolescents’ achievement may not be so much influenced by their intelligence as by the environment they are exposed to.
   (B) A closer observation of adolescents’ abilities and personal temperament is needed to inform future teaching.
   (C) Adolescents should be given more opportunities to observe differences in academic and occupational environments.
   (D) Disparities in one’s achievement are due in large part to one’s inherited characteristics.

37. Which of the following is the claim of the passage?
   (A) There are disparities in adolescents’ abilities.
   (B) Studies show that adolescents’ achievements are highly relevant to their abilities.
   (C) An adolescent’s abilities cannot be well established even if opportunities are provided.
   (D) Situational factors play a critical role in determining one’s achievement.
Lotteries are frequently sold as a way both to raise revenues for state governments and, at the same time, potentially terminates illegal numbers games. Many states seeing lottery money as “painless taxation” believe that the lottery is now “the predominant new revenue source for state government,” according to the National Conference of State Legislators. These states also make the rather tortured argument that “people are going to gamble anyway, so better for the state to get the money than organized crime.” This claim is money-grubbing in disguise. As Nelson Rose, professor of law at Whittier College, notes: “If making money is the goal, why doesn’t the state own restaurants, or open its own brothel?”

38. Which of the following is most likely to be the author’s implicit attitude toward lottery business?
(A) It is legitimate for state governments to determine how to tax businesses, albeit with certain ethical concerns.
(B) State governments should not rely on lottery business as a revenue source.
(C) Since managing lottery business makes state taxation policy more flexible, state governments should be allowed to do so.
(D) When it comes to the increment of state revenues, all means are justifiable.

39. Which of the following is NOT a reason for the state government to rationalize lottery business?
(A) Lotteries are being sold to increase the state’s tax income.
(B) People are bound to gamble, so it’s better to have the state manage it than to leave it to the hands of crime organizations.
(C) State governments legalize lottery business for those who wish to purchase a hope of getting rich.
(D) State governments intend to divert funds from illegal operations and channel this revenue into state treasury.

40. The statement made by Professor Nelson Rose connotes that _______________.
(A) profit making should not be the prioritized agenda of any state administration
(B) chartering restaurant business can also make as much money as lottery business
(C) the state government should not say no to any business that brings in money
(D) the state government should legalize prostitution and also open brothels

四、長篇閱讀（第 41－50 題）

One of the great, abiding myths of America is that it is a melting pot, a big, warm stew of all the ethnic and cultural differences that formerly separated people, now blended together into a smooth, supremely palatable America.

Language was the prime example—within a generation or two, immigrants to America were expected to shed their Chinese, Korean, Spanish or Italian mother tongues for initially accented and ultimately flawless English. But ironically, in an era when the world’s lingua franca is overwhelmingly English, there are a skyrocketing number of people in America who not only have limited proficiency in English, but who live in households where no one speaks English very well. The U.S. Census calls these households “linguistically isolated,” and the number of people living in them has surged in recent years—by more than 50 percent, to nearly 12 million people. The total number of people in America today speaking English either “not at all” or with limited proficiency is nearly 25 million, more than the population of Taiwan.
41. What is the main idea of this passage?
   (A) Americans are generally reluctant to learn a foreign language.
   (B) The melting pot notion explains why Americans are less competent in English communication.
   (C) Immigrants harbor a grudge against English learning.
   (D) The linguistically isolated population is increasing at a rate that raises concerns.

42. Which of the following descriptions about “melting pot” is TRUE?
   (A) It is a metaphor of cookware used to illustrate the diversification of cuisine cultures.
   (B) It is a claim that people should be separated from one another because of the cultural differences.
   (C) It is a belief that people of different ethnic groups can assimilate to make a heterogeneous society homogeneous.
   (D) It used to be an abiding myth in the U.S. and now becomes a ubiquitous creed in the world.

43. The underlined word “palatable” can be best replaced by _______________.
   (A) impressionable (B) agreeable (C) plausible (D) susceptible

44. The underlined term “lingua franca” refers to _______________.
   (A) an overwhelming phenomenon of learning English as a foreign language
   (B) a language used exclusively by non-immigrants in a monolingual society
   (C) a language commonly used by people of different languages for communication
   (D) an unusual situation that provokes conflicts because people of different languages cannot understand each other

45. According to the U.S. Census, _______________.
   (A) twelve million Americans are living in an environment in which English exposure is insufficient or even unavailable
   (B) the number of linguistically isolated households has plunged
   (C) immigrants from Taiwan have the least difficulty adjusting themselves to the English-only environment
   (D) immigrants in the U.S. all have limited English proficiency, so that many of them are studying English

The visual distinctiveness of a brand may be a combination of any of the following: name, letters, numbers, a symbol, a signature, a shape, a slogan, a color, a particular typeface. But the name is the most important element of the brand as its use in language provides a universal reference point. The name is also the one element of the brand that should endure. All the other elements can change over time, but the brand name should be “as constant as the northern star,” like Caesar.

This is not to say that brands achieve true visual distinctiveness through their names alone. Nike without its tick-like swoosh, Michelin without exuberant Monsieur Bibendum, and McDonald’s without its Golden Arches would be paler properties indeed. Brands like these, and many thousands of others, rely for their visual distinctiveness on the harmonious combination of these elements and the consistency with which this is maintained.
That being said, in certain markets where the use of branding is highly developed and consumers are particularly sophisticated, these rules are sometimes tested. In the fashion clothing market, for example, Diesel has experimented with the use of completely different logos, and even changed the name for a season. The success of such tactics depends on the awareness of the consumer. The brand itself enjoys almost “cult” status, and the loyalty with which they are followed by their devotees has assured such success.

46. According to the passage, in what way does a brand distinguish itself from others?
(A) A brand per se is a distinct icon and needs negligible efforts to manage.
(B) A brand can only be recognized through its product spokesmodel.
(C) Brand visibility requires sarcastic caricature to impress customers.
(D) A brand identity relies on a compatible assortment of elements.

47. The passage is to _____________.
(A) explain how branding is scarcely emphasized by international businesses
(B) articulate an inconceivable future direction for world-famous brands
(C) discuss the multiple factors that could influence branding success
(D) examine the possibilities to franchise brand names and logos to international dealers

48. Which of the following statements is most likely to be TRUE?
(A) Nike’s swoosh and McDonald’s golden arches are exemplary logos that strengthen their respective brands.
(B) Diesel’s branding experiment was a lost cause and proved that branding has to be consistent.
(C) A brand name needs to be constantly changed in order to attract new customers.
(D) A strong brand can disregard the level of consumer awareness while making branding decisions.

49. In Paragraph 3, the transitional phrase “That being said” can be best replaced by ________________.
(A) Furthermore
(B) Nevertheless
(C) As a matter of fact
(D) Accordingly

50. The “cult” status Diesel enjoys suggests that ________________.
(A) Diesel’s customers are almost unreservedly committed to and have great veneration for the brand
(B) Diesel has always been cultivating the brand to maintain its high-end status as a luxury brand
(C) Diesel undertakes an unconventional brand management to cater to the niche market
(D) Diesel is famous for its signature products and tactful branding strategies to assure customers of 100% satisfaction
